Important Transformation Patterns

1. Exclamation of Joy

Subject + exclaimed with joy + that + clause

“Hurrah! We have won.”

→ They exclaimed with joy that they had won.

2. Exclamation of Sorrow

Subject + exclaimed with sorrow + that + clause

“Alas! He is dead.”

→ He exclaimed with sorrow that he was dead.

3. Exclamation of Admiration

Subject + exclaimed with admiration + that + clause

“What a beautiful flower!”

→ She exclaimed with admiration that it was a very beautiful flower.

4. Exclamation of Surprise

Subject + exclaimed with surprise + that + clause

“What a huge building!”

→ He exclaimed with surprise that it was a very huge building.

5. Praise with “Bravo!”

Subject + praised + object + for + V-ing

“Bravo! You have done well.”

→ The teacher praised him for doing well.

6. “Alas!” + Regret

Subject + regretted / exclaimed with regret + that + clause

“Alas! I have wasted my time.”

→ He regretted that he had wasted his time.

★ Golden Rule

The word “exclaimed” alone does not tell us the exact emotion. We should identify the emotion first:

Hurrah! → Joy → exclaimed with joy / rejoiced

Alas! → Sorrow → exclaimed with sorrow / lamented

Bravo! → Praise → praised / applauded

What a beautiful scene! → Admiration → admired / exclaimed with admiration

What! You are here! → Surprise → exclaimed with surprise

Fie! → Disgust → exclaimed with disgustAAOh! I am frightened! → Fear → exclaimed with fear

What a pity! → Regret/Sorrow → regretted / exclaimed with sorrow

Thus, the best reporting verb in an exclamatory sentence is determined by emotion + context, not merely by the presence of an exclamation mark (!).
